With the current state of encryption the only people that will be impacted by this Internet surveillance will be innocent people. With the current state of the government and the lack of controls on so-called "counter-terrorism" laws I feel this is a dangerous Orwellian and unnecessary step.

This is just another violation of privacy and another toll ripe for abuse that harkens back to the "Red scare" of the McCarthy era. This erosion of our freedoms and our privacy cannot be allowed to continue. When will it be enough? When you diverge slightly from a straight path, over time, the diversion, and the abuse becomes great. The question is will the government walk a crooked path that replaces liberty for convenience? That is not the America I want to live in.
